- Certain Taxes such as the Regional Infrastructure Development Levy, Social Responsibility Levy and Debit Tax were altogether removed, responding to public demands for a simpler tax system.
- In relation to other facets of tax administration, there was a common grievance that a level playing field did not exist among taxpayers with regard to interpretations of tax laws, since different individuals, gave contradicting interpretations with regard to similar matters.
 - Further, there was another common grievance that justice did not prevail with regard to the appeals process that prevailed with the operation of the Tax Appeals Board since the Board was virtually a part of the Inland Revenue Department and hence decision makers were not sufficiently independent.
 - Consequently, there was a tendency for many such appeals to end up in Court, which is a time consuming exercise for the state and which also increases the workload of the judiciary contributing to laws delays, which could be avoided, if an effective appeals mechanism is introduced.
 - In this backdrop, a uniform interpretation mechanism and an autonomous appeals process was institutionalized. An Interpretations Committee that is in charge of providing interpretations, consisting of senior officers of the Inland Revenue Department was formulated having made the necessary changes to the Inland Revenue Act^d. Further, with the enactment of the Tax Appeals Commission Act No. 23 of 2011, an autonomous Tax Appeals Commission was appointed to hear appeals.

^cCorporate Income Tax was reduced from 35 percent to 28 percent.

^d Section 208 A of the Inland Revenue Act No. 10 of 2006 as amended by Inland Revenue (Amendment) Act No. 22 of 2011 required the appointment of a Committee consisting of Senior Official of the IRD to interpret the provisions of all Acts administered by the Commissioner General of Inland Revenue.
